

Judicial Nationalists in ROC — The Constitutionalist and Xinhai Revolutionaries in Courts

Jiang, Zhao-Xin

Abstract

This article mainly argues that the judicial history in Republican Era as a whole is in essence a time of legal nationalist movement. The legal changes and transitions established in the Republican judicial system can't be achieved without those judicial nationalists who chose to work hard together for the legal transformation and acted in uniformity regardless of their ideological differences. Therefore, to understand the modernity issue in China, we have to understand these committed judicial nationalists.
